OUR WEEKLY FASHION LETTER

A TIMELY REVIEW OF THE LATEST MODES (Special) By JUDIC CHOLLET

A trimming that is most effective on plain colored silk costumes is a souache braid sewed on in intricate designs, which are then filled in with hand embroidery. This is often done in the coloring of the gown, though occasionally one sees the idea carried out in Egyptian motifs and colorings. These, by the way, are pronounced by the knowing as the latest idea in the trimming line.

Polka dots are experiencing a return to favor, and many of the prettiest silks are scattered with this pattern. It is, however, a pattern that needs careful handling to make it effective. A dark blue ground with a white coin dot is the favorite at present.

Plaid silks are very much used and are usually seen in the black and white and darker clan tartans. These plaids are made up quite simply, many of them in the accordion plaited frocks that have had so great a run this season. But these skirts are apt to sag after a few wearings and look anything save smart.

Little wraps in the place of jackets are as modish for the younger girls as for their mothers and elder sisters and are especially becoming to girls so slender that they need building out. Capes of all sorts are pretty and practical and are often made of broadcloth in overlapping styles, the cloth simply cut, not hemmed or trimmed. The collar of these is stitched tailor fashion and often inlaid with velvet or ornamented with braid or embroidery.

For girls in their teens the circular sun plaited skirt, with fancy short loose jacket, is pretty for street wear. The girl's costume pictured is a dainty corset affair carried out in melon pink voile. The blouse bretelle straps and high belt are of malines lace lined with pink chiffon.

A TOUCH OF COLOR. Plaited tulle ruffles for the neck are even more popular than ever. Elephant and smoke gray, cinnamon brown and chestnut are the colors best liked.

A touch of orange is considered extremely smart on certain costumes, but great care should be exercised in the use of this very brilliant tone.

Scotch plaid belts of silk or leather are worn with linen gowns. Blue and green effects are the most liked. Occasionally plaid stockings to match with patent leather pumps are worn.

Slip corset covers that open in the back are made for wearing with sheer lingerie waists. These covers in some mysterious way hide the dress shields.

A stout woman has invented a corset cover that is a boon to sisters of solid proportions. It is a tight fitting waist of muslin, low necked and buttoned in front. At the sides are attached dainty lace trimmed pieces that fit over the front and give a pretty feminine touch of fluffiness without appreciably adding to the size of the wearer.

The beach dress seen in the cut is of white linen fashioned en princesse.

The sailor collar, cuffs and skirt bands are of navy blue linen.

THE PERENNIAL BLACK SILK.

In the fall black silk dresses promise to be very much worn. Indeed, judging from the autumn color silk cards issued by leading Paris firms, dark tones will predominate, with black as a special feature.

There is a new shade of old rose that is very attractive, known as "acajou." It resembles mahogany, but is really a dull old rose.

Gray will be a popular shade in the autumn in dark gun metal tones. And some of the striped silks soon to appear on shop counters show overplaids in contrasting colors, such as blue, red, olive and myrtle green.

Tan, beige and gray gloves are more in favor than white, and it is a great relief to the economical woman to know that she may appear in these colors without being considered out of the mode.

The crown of hats seems to be growing higher and higher. In direct contrast to these are the large, wide, coarse straw sailor hats for country wear trimmed with a band of gold or silver tissue round the crown. A cachepeigne gives the required tilt.

The hat illustrated is in black crin, with a white border. The crown is adorned with a ruche of black malines and La France roses.

SCHOOL FROCKS AGAIN.

Eolienne makes the prettiest kind of a cool weather dress, and in wash materials the mercerized eolienne are very smart.

Skeleton styles lend themselves wonderfully well to the making over of gowns, and for renovating last year's school frocks nothing is better as a model.

Notwithstanding the vogue of linen and canvas cloth for shirt waist suits, some very fashionable women, Mrs. Roosevelt among the number, cling to the old favorite silk suit in a becoming shade. The president's wife wears a dainty mauve shirt waist costume of checked violet and white silk made with a deep flounce of hand embroidered swiss muslin and a yoke of the same sheer material. The sleeves are bell shaped at the elbow, with the edging frilled in and falling almost to the wrist. A wide girdele of a darker shade of velvet adds to the effect.

Useful, comfortable taffeta pailotots are always worn. Every woman numbers one or more of them in her wardrobe. A colored wrap of this kind as well as a black model is the best selection.

In the cut is seen a gown of striped blue and white glaze silk made in the princess style. Irish lace trims the bodice in yoke fashion, while ruffles of valenciennes are inset into the sleeves. Pretty touches of coral velvet are added by way of trimming.
